X

ABSTRACT

In recent years, named entity recognition ("NER") has been a popular research in natural language processing[1, 2], while traditional deep learning methods require a large amount of labeled data for model training, which makes them not suitable for areas where labeling resources are scarce